

Golden Age of Private Aviation: Michelin-stars to Tuscan Vineyards

👤 Si Si Penaloza 🕒 August 5, 2019 📁 Aviation, Featured

Flying private is both luxurious and exclusive, making private jet travel the preferred choice among executives and celebrities. Brave new business models have risen to meet the increasing demand of a new generation of tech savvy leisure travelers who crave the perks of flying private, without the burden of ownership costs, or heavy upfront membership dues. Brokers access a variety of operators to create a “floating fleet”, answering only to their clients, leveraging buying power to offer the best deals.

Spur of the moment jaunt to Santa Barbara? Magellan Jets can handle it. With liberty to use any aircraft in the program 365 days a year with no black out days or peak surcharges, in as little as 8 hours’ notice, Magellan eliminates the stress and ambiguity from travel planning. Unlike memberships that lock you into a contract before you’ve flown one flight, Magellan is so confident members’ expectations will be exceeded with their new ELEVATE program, they will refund a membership up to 30 days from joining. Members have the ability to purchase hours in ten aircraft types including the most desirable aircraft such as the Phenom 300, Challenger 300 and Gulfstream 450. Moreover, Magellan is a purely private, members can be certain that their personal information will be treated with discretion to ensure their complete privacy. Unlike competitors’ flights, which can be tracked, Magellan offers complete anonymity.

Flying private is the fastest way to travel, especially compared to wasting half a day or more at commercial airports. Streamlined and efficient, private jet travel allows you to kick back and focus on more important details... like which beach to visit first, bookmarking the best bistros, or scouting the club with the wildest nightlife.